"The World is Burning" Issue 1.0

Beautiful night, isn't it?
You can almost feel
Earth's heat

Do you think we should help them?

Nah, it's their own fault.

California-Transplant Human Physiology Student Doesn't Get the Get Out Upset

It was announced recently that while Get Out would be considered for several award nominations, it would be considered as a comedy. CalPoly transfer student Jade Sloane seems to be confused as to why fans of the movie are upset by this. "I mean, I get what they were trying to do an all, trying to deal with racism and stuff. But it's supposed to be a satire, right? I read a BuzzFeed article about how it was a satire, and satire means funny, right? So, what's the big deal anyway? And besides, it is kind of funny considering how out there the plot is. I mean, in what world would something like that even happen? Anyway, it feels too soon to talk about racism and slavery in America. I mean, it happened, what, like, a few hundred years ago? Like, give it a sec...Have I seen it? No, movies like that aren't really my thing, you know?" Yes, we do.

Administration Shoots Down Black Student Union Anthem Choice, Gives Organization Entire Building as Headquarters

Like Davin and Goliath, it's the Black Student Union against the Administration yet again. After some difficulty being recognized as a school affiliated group, the BSU has run into another hiccup. After the group voted on "Change Gonna Come" by Sam Cooke as their group's anthem, the board of directors has asked them to pick a song with "less racial connotation." Despite this setback, the BSU has been granted use of the basement in Deady Hall. Because of this placement, the administration has postponed renaming the building.

Father John Misty Concert Shut Down by Fire Marshall

The Father John Misty Concert at the Cuthbert

Amphitheater was cut short last weekend, because of over-crowding. "Due to ticket takers being in the crowd, bouncers being in the crowd, and Eugene citizens finding ways inside without tickets, even though there were no ticket takers present, the concert had to be shut down for safety reasons. We knew this concert was going to be a big one, but I don't think even the Father could have foreseen this mayhem. You couldn't tell the incense smoke from the marijuana smoke. Students were getting high on shrooms with their professors. There's never been an event like this in Eugene," explained the Fire Marshall. "I've been growing out my beard for WEEKS, only to have all that effort go to waste. I mean, I bet most of these people aren't even real fans. The only people who should have been allowed to attend this concert are the ones who were fans before he even earned the title Father."

Met Gala 2018 Theme Announced

With 2018 fast approaching, Anna Wintour and the team at Vogue are already preparing for the first Monday in May, the annual Met Gala. "This year," she says, "we were going to go with a very creative theme and celebrate one of the most utterly unique talents in fashion today, but looking back at Met Galas in the past, we just realized there was no point. So, this year we are celebrating the work of the house Dior. They've been around longer than I have, somehow, and are known for their classic designs. In other words, they're basic. So, this year, wear another sequined, strapless sheath dress, Gigi Hadid. Wear that little black dress you claim to be "timeless" so you can get away with repeating outfits, Selena Gomez. It's fine. This year, Rihanna will be the one who doesn't follow my theme and the rest of you will fit the dress code perfectly. There's a first time for everything." Editor's note: following this interview, Wintour sighed loudly, put a pair of sunglasses on over the ones she was already wearing, and marched out of the office, talking to herself the whole way home about how many people are going to be wearing the same thing as each other, or if you'll be able to tell the difference between them at all.

New Survey Shows: Americans Want Obamacare Repealed, Hope Congress Doesn't Go After Affordable Care Act

In a recent survey done by this publication, over 40% of American want Obamacare repealed. "Honestly, I don't care what the benefits are. Obama is gone and I don't want this country to have anything to do with him" rages surveyed Jonny Tucker. "I think Obama only created it so he could put money in his own pocket and give handouts to lazy, nasty immigrants while robbing the rest of us of our money and our health. If Congress doesn't do something about it, I'm moving to Canada to get away from all the bureaucracy and healthcare handouts. But I don't know what my family would do if Congress repealed the Affordable Care Act. It really gives folks like myself a chance to stay healthy and keep the rest of the family healthy, too. But if they took away Obamacare, why take away AAC too? It just don't make no sense to me." Astounding.

Tiffany Trump Announces She Will Run for President in 2028, Donald Trump Responds, "Who?"

Yesterday, youngest daughter of President Donald Trump, Tiffany Trump, announced on Instagram she intends to run for president as soon as she turns 35, in 2028. When asked what he thinks, the President responded, "Who? I don't know of a Tiffany. Sounds like my Ivanka should run against her and then there can be two Trumps in the Oval Office. Why do they call it that anyway? It's more like a circle to me." Ivanka has yet to respond to the President's proposal, as she's too busy thinking about his last one. Meanwhile, Tiffany's attempts to gain her father's attention are failing more and more. Soon after this announcement, she arrived at the White House in a burka, but was immediately escorted out on her father's order or "get that camel jockey out of here!"

McDonalds to Open Restaurants Throughout South Sudan in Honor of Famine Victims

In a press conference held yesterday, Ronald McDonald vowed to open at least three restaurants throughout South Sudan. "Once the dust settles on this whole famine situation in South Sudan and it's safe for people to enter and live, our team will go in and open at least four restaurants in honor of the famine victims. Hunger is a terrible thing in the world, so once this is all over, we at McDonalds want to see that every South Sudan resident, who lives near one of our locations and can afford to go out to eat, will never go hungry again. We are committed not only to providing tasty, inexpensive meals, but also to ending hunger in the world. That's why we created the Dollar Menu and contrary to rumors going around, at least one of these proposed locations will still have the Dollar Menu available." This comes after news that over 100,000 people are estimated to die due to the famine sweeping across the country. When asked

UN on Trump: But We Wanted a Sister

Although may thought Trump wouldn't last the even a year as president, he's still here. As the anniversary of his inauguration approaches, UN member leaders recall the feeling of finding out he was president. "I haven't been this disappointed since...well ever. Even when I did get a brother instead of a sister, like I wanted," remembers Lithuanian president Dalia Radevnik. "It's like mom and dad told you it was a girl, they bought all girl things, they had a girl name picked out, then they decided to come home with a boy instead. He almost reminds me of that kid from Toy Story. You know, the little shit head who melts things together and steals things from his sister? Yeah, that's exactly it. But he isn't smart enough to steal things yet. For now, he just steals attention from mom and dad all the time." Editor's note: at the end of this interview, President Trump walked over, threw my notepad, and told me to start over, this time interviewing him instead of "Lufthansa, which, by the way, is not nearly as great as my country. I mean, how big is it, anyway? America is huge. The biggest country there is."

Queen Elizabeth II: "Would it Really Be So Bad If We Took the U.S. Back?" Survey Results Say No

In an exclusive interview last week, Queen Elizabeth II was asked to ponder the possibility of the United Kingdom retaking America. "I'm not sure we'd want to take all of America, probably just the north half and the west. And anyone who voted for that malignant Cheeto Puff will be deported to the south, not that they probably don't live there already. I mean, we could bring civility, health, and happiness back to the American people. They already fawn over my family as if we're their royal family, so it wouldn't be a huge change." A staggering 85% of Americans said they wouldn't be opposed or bothered by the potential governance change. The rest are from Florida.

Intergalactic Union Publishes Definitive List of Ways to Keep Humans Away, Protect Home World

The Intergalactic Union released their official list of proven ways to keep humans from invading your home planet. Follow these steps for the survival of your species:

- Cover everything in “camouflage”: It’s this stupid pattern, usually shades of green but can be found in other colors, and all the Earthlings like to joke about how they can’t see things that are covered in camo. They are apparently not joking about not seeing it.
- Throw gluten everywhere: this one is specifically for Americans. For some reason, many of the have convinced themselves they cannot have a basic form of nutrients and calories. They claim it is “unhealthy” and that “their body is a temple”

- Tell them your planet doesn’t have just two genders: better yet, tell them there aren’t genders at all. Humans are very weird about knowing exactly what equipment each other has for copulation.

Should We Help Them Out? 99% of Planets Say “No”

It’s no secret that humans are having a bit of a hard time right now. I mean, just look at the dumbasses they have in charge. But while it’s easy to...what do they call it? Feel bad! While it’s easy to feel badly for them, that doesn’t mean it’s our problem. In a recent survey of all the planets surrounding Earth, only one planet said they would be willing to help: The Moon. Even though Earthlings claim the moon as their own, the moon admires Earth for staying away, for the most part, and would like to help them so they won’t come looking to settle somewhere else. The Moon may be onto something, but, for now, we’re not going to do anything.

Heal the Burn: Mars Showing Signs of Recovery from Sunburn

Red may be the color of the season down on Earth, but Mars is hoping to be off trend soon. The “Red Planet” suffered a tragic sunburn seven eons ago, killing over half of their population. But thanks to advancements in planet grafting, Mars is feeling the love from Venus and is starting to show major signs of improvement.

Saturn Finally Comments on Losing Prisoner: “Whoops”

“We didn’t mean to lose him,” claims renowned Saturn Prison Warden of escapee Fonald Drumf. “We are aware of his location and activity as well as his alias: Donald Trump. He is wreaking havoc on Earth faster than we can even think of a way to remove him. Our top defense strategists are trying to come up with a way to retrieve him without landing another ship in Area 51. It’s a miracle he hasn’t slipped up on his identity yet. But we don’t want to wait for that time to come. We are taking this matter very seriously.”
